Stockbreeders: strategic allies of Senasica

The National Confederation of Livestock Organizations (CNOG) accompanies the productive sector with the aim of improving its competitiveness, and is also a strategic ally of Senasica

Almost 90 years ago, during the government of General Lázaro Cárdenas del Río, livestock producers held the first National Livestock Convention, which led to the creation of the Livestock Associations Law, published in the Official Gazette of the Federation in 1935.

The National Confederation of Livestock Organizations (CNOG) accompanies the productive sector with the aim of improving its competitiveness, and is also a strategic ally of Senasica, since it collaborates with technicians in the operation of various animal health campaigns, as well as with traceability systems and certification of origin of national cattle.

For 18 years, the presidency of the CNOG has been headed by Oswaldo Cházaro Montalvo, who this year will hand over the post to Homero García de la Llata, who has an outstanding career in animal health matters for the various livestock species.

In Tampico, Tamaulipas, more than 1,500 producers participated in the inauguration of the 86th Ordinary General Assembly of the CNOG, in which animals of the Zebu, Brangus, Red Brangus, Beefmaster, Charbray, Simmental and Simbrah breeds, among others, are also exhibited .
