

Citrus Canker

Pest under active surveillance

This is one of the most important diseases affecting citrus. This bacterium is spread over long distances through infected plant material, and through raindrops over short distances. The main economically important hosts of this bacterium are Citrus species. The most important citrus fruits are limes, oranges, tangerines, lemons and grapefruits.